Empowering youth for large-scale seagrass restoration

In the Oosterschelde (NL), young people from the Sea Ranger Service are planting seagrass. The recruitment and training of these full-time Sea Rangers is now assisting governments and industry in North-West Europe with the management, conservation and restoration of our coastal seas.

This demonstrates the mission of the REBORN project: providing young people with vocational training and employment as full-time restoration professionals, to accelerate large-scale seagrass restoration and directly support the implementation of the EU Nature Restoration Regulation.
